League Upset As Charles Turns Hunter

LONDON — UPI — The League Against Cruel Sports reacted sharply today to reports that Prince Charles had killed his first stag at the age of 13.

Reports from Balmoral, the royal family's Scottish summer home, said Charles felled the stag with his first shot with a hunting rifle as his dad, Prince Philip, looked on.

"I am not surprised," said Mrs. Jean Pyke, a leader in the League Against Cruel Sports. "They have been teaching the boy to do horrible things like this. Perhaps it comes from King Henry VII . . . it is dreadful and nasty."

League Vice Chairman Raymond Rowley termed the shooting "hardly in keeping" with Queen Elizabeth's patronage of the royal society for the preventing of cruelty to animals.

But at Balmoral, a gamekeeper said Charles' kill was "quite an achievement for a young lad. He promises to be a first class shot."

Principal speakers will be Dr. Frank K. Edmonson, president, Associated Universities for Research in Astronomy; Dr. Lee A. DuBridge, president, California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, and a member of the National Science Board; and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. Creed Black, vice president and executive editor of the Wilmington, Del., News & Journal, is chairman.

"Report From Russia" will be the title of one of the sessions. It will be conducted by three member editors who toured Russia this summer. They are Black, William Woestendieck, editorial director of Newsday, and Lauren Soth, editor of the editorial pages of the Des Moines Register & Tribune.

Program director is Paul McKalip, editor of the editorial page, Tucson Daily Citizen, and an NSEW director.

Conference delegates also will discuss the editorial pages of members newspapers and consider their merits and shortcomings.

On the Thursday, the women will go on tour of the San Xavier Mission and Nogales, Son., and will be met by the men in the evening in the Mexican town for a fiesta.

Next day there will be a tour of the Kitt Peak Observatory, conducted by Dr. Nicholas Mayall, the observatory director.

Other tours will include the Arizona-Sonora Desert Museum and Old Tucson on Saturday.
